Description

The Guess Collection documents a century of life in DeKalb County through court documents, petitions, voter records, tax records, and other documents. The collection spans 1844 to 1950, with the majority of the items from the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. The collection consists of five boxes: Box 1, Miscellaneous Court Documents; Box 2, Petitions and Voter Records (Court of Ordinary); Box 3, Documents Relating to Land, Roads, and Animals; Box 4, Court Vouchers; and Box 5, Documents Relating to Taxes/Treasurer's Records. Box 1 is divided into special areas of interest, including documents pertaining to women and children, African-Americans, the Confederacy, etc. Of particular interest is the 1862 bill of sale for a slave in Folder 2. Box 2 contains mostly petitions for the levying of school taxes in the early twentieth century. Of particular interest are the signed petitions and lists of voters for each election. These documents are separated into DeKalb County districts. Box 3 contains original land deeds for DeKalb and Fulton Counties. These deeds often give detailed descriptions of land lots and are quite useful in tracing ownership of land. Box 4 contains court vouchers, including jurors' receipts, pauper's fund and jail fund receipts. Finally, Box 5 contains taxes and treasury records for DeKalb, including special receipts of John Steward, a wealthy Panthersville/Lithonia landowner, and J.A. Mason, a DeKalb County treasurer later prosecuted for mismanaged funds.

Additional notes concerning order and contents are written on some folders.
Chronological order within category has been used whenever possible, and undated items usually precede dated ones.
