

Students Try The Limbo

Bill Newsom 11/29/89

The Tamboo Steel Drum Band recently visited Rowland Elementary and delighted the students with an exciting program. Many percussion instruments were shown and demonstrated with the help of the audience. The highlight of the Tamboo show was the limbo dance with Rowland students as the participants. Teachers Tom Murphy and Janda Sellers hold the stick while students Hung Nguyen and Oscar Matiz limbo under.

Seventh Grader Featured Speaker

Honor student Yama Sharifi, standing between teachers Robin Lindsey, left, and Sherry LeCroy, was Honors Day speaker at Rowland Elementary School where he is a seventh grader. He challenged his peers to set goals and maintain good study habits and discussed the necessity of choosing the right friends. His younger sister, Samera, who is seated beside Dr. Art Dexter, principal, introduced him.

Around the World with Postage Stamps

Rowland sixth graders learn world geography by associating stamps with specific countries, continents and respective global areas. Stamps are used to prepare projects on bookmarks and buttons. They appear as well on mobiles and on vocabulary-

Eight Perfect Years

Marvin Wooley, a seventh grade graduate of Rowland Elementary School, received a special certificate for 8 years of perfect attendance. Marvin went to school every day, from kindergarten through seventh grade and did not miss a day! Marvin is a member of the Junior Beta Club, is an honor student, and was also recognized as Rowland's 1996 Daughters of the American Republic's Citizenship award. Marvin will be attending Peachtree Junior High in the fall.
